President's Message

Dear Members:

Within the past week, the AGA national office sent out over 12,000 e-invoices to our membership and to all Certified Government Financial Managers.

Our Chapter membership rolls reflect a total of 242 members for the 2013-2014 chapter year and a quick review indicates that a number of our chapter members have already renewed for the 2014-2015 membership year.

THANK YOU!

However, we also have more than 60 members who have not yet renewed for the 2013-2014 chapter year. Please log on at <http://www.agacgfm.org/Membership/overview.aspx> to check the status of your membership. Every member is important to us and, if you have any issues or concerns, please speak to someone from our Chapter Executive Committee or contact me directly.

Why renew your membership?

There are many reasons to renew your membership and be involved in our chapter. For many, the primary reason is the educational opportunities through our chapter meetings and the four national training events. Additionally, you may expand your professional network through participation in social networking via LinkedIn, attendance at chapter meetings, enrolling in complimentary webinars, or joining in leadership and volunteer opportunities locally and nationally. Please check out the national website for more information related to your member benefits.

Our February meeting will be held at Snyder's Willow Grove on February 20th. We have two great speakers lined up. Our first speaker, Denise Wu, a principal from CliftonLarsonAllen, will share her thoughts on "How to Motivate Your Employees during Furloughs and Sequestration". Our second speaker is Doug Glenn, Deputy CFO, US Department of Interior, who will speak to us about the "Federal Financial Industry – Past, Present, Future." Both presentations will be informative and entertaining! Registration is open. We hope to see you there!

Sincerely,

Johnny

Douglas A. Glenn is currently serving at the Department of Interior as the Deputy Chief Financial Officer and Director of the Office of Financial Management. Prior to that, Doug served as the Finance Director at NASA and the Deputy Chief Financial Officer for Financial Policy and Operations at the General Services Administration (GSA) from 6/2004 to 6/2010. Doug's proudest accomplishments include:

- ◆ Green ratings in all nine Treasury MTS performance measures (only three other agencies could make this claim at the time).

A native of San Diego, CA, Doug holds a BS in Finance from the University of Colorado at Boulder. He is a Certified Public Accountant (despite the AICPA losing his exam on one occasion) and a former Certified Management Accountant. He has co-authored procedures listed in Appendix I of the Office of Management and Budget's Bulletin No. 01-02, Audit Requirements for Federal Financial Statements and portions of the A-123 Implementation Guide. In addition, he co-chaired A-136 Committees in 2008 - 2010 and served as the President of the Washington DC AGA chapter.

Member Spotlight : Moyo Oluyinka

What do you do, and how long have you been doing it?

I serve as an Accounting Associate at Hope Health Systems, Inc within the Mental Health industry. I am responsible for organizing, monitoring and controlling the agency's Accounts Receivables and Accounts Payable accounts. I have served in this role for 3 years.

Where did you complete your formal education?

I completed my formal education at the Earl G. Graves School of Business and Management, an AACSB accredited school at Morgan State University, located in Baltimore, Maryland. I graduated from Morgan State University with a Bachelors of Science in Accounting in 2010.

How long have you been a member of AGA, why did you join, and what does membership meant to you?

I have been a member since September 2012. I initially heard about the AGA in March 2012, when my professor recommended that I complete an application for a scholarship the Baltimore Chapter was offering to students. During the scholarship luncheon, I observed the interaction between the Accounting professionals and the student scholarship recipients, and I was inspired by the variety of professionals who desired to assist the students in whichever way they could professionally. Also, the organization's commitment to improve its members' professional development bolstered my desire to be a part of the AGA and serve on the Early Careers Committee. Being an AGA member gives me a sense of direction in terms of personal development and professional development. As a member, I have the ability to look at fellow members and create a short-term and long-term projection of where I could be based on my career plan to become an Auditor in Public Accounting. This experience also provides me with opportunities that are available to an Accounting degree holder, and I also gain an in-depth understanding of components of leadership, servitude, and more importantly collaboration between fairly experienced and advanced professionals.

How has AGA helped your career?

AGA has helped my career by granting me access to many people resources I may not have had access to otherwise. I have the ability to intimately interact with associates, managers, and senior partners who are well versed in their roles. Although I am yet to maximize these resources and opportunities, I am certain that AGA can have great impact on my career once my efforts are committed.

What activities do you enjoy in your free time?

(Laughs) I rarely have free time because I work full time and I am currently pursuing my Masters' degree; however, when I do have free time I either read or sleep. I don't get enough sleep during the semester, so when I have free time I tend to spend it sleeping.

Who has influenced you the most, personally and/or professionally?

As cliché as it may sound, my father has inspired me personally and my mentor has influenced me professionally. My father is a man of great wisdom, integrity, humility, and passion. He taught me to always approach situations with a trustworthy heart and with an ear that not only hears, but listens. In my experiences, I have learned that one of the most valuable characteristics in any human being is caring. When we recognize that an individual genuinely cares about us, we easily let our guard down, engage them, and respect their opinions. My mentor certainly influences me professionally. She motivates me to pursue my dreams wholeheartedly, no matter how uncomfortable the experiences may be. When I lack vision or faith in myself to achieve the goals I set, she encourages me daily to assess my skills, to hone those skills, and to challenge myself further. I would not be where I am if I did not have these individuals within my support system.

What is your favorite vacation spot?

I have not been around the world enough to have a favorite vacation spot per se; however, I do desire to one day spend my vacation in Santorini, Greece. It is such a beautiful city, and it seems to be rich in culture and history.

If you could choose another career, what would it be and why?

If I could choose another career, I would be an interior designer or a fashion stylist. Our world is filled with delicate little items that could create grand art when fused together. I appreciate colors and the ability to combine eccentric items to create a unique and vibrant visual.

What is something most people do not know about you?

Most people do not know that I love performing arts. I enjoy singing, dancing, acting; essentially anything that involves performing before an audience or a group of people. I always wanted to be an actress or a singer. Who knows, maybe I'll win a Tony or a Grammy someday!

What books are you currently reading?

I am currently reading 2 books, one for personal growth and the other for professional growth. The first book is titled In Search of a Proverbs 31 Man by Michelle McKinney Hammond; it provides the reader with a biblical approach to qualities we can offer and expect in various relationships. The second book is titled From Failure to Promise by Dr. C. Moorer, which presents the reader with a precise outlook on coping with the "failures" we may experience, recovering from them, and advancing further to obtain successes in his/her professional life.

What is the quality you most admire in others and why?

Great Question! The characteristic quality I most admire in others is selfless service. I admire an individual's ability to assist, motivate, and encourage people in need of it. I believe we each have our different walks and purposes in life. Some of us are capable of creating a vision, planning a course of action, and finding resources to successfully execute the plan, while others create the vision and are unable to follow through due to lack of motivation or lack of a tactical plan of action. It is unfortunate that society teaches us to focus more on ourselves and less on others. I truly admire a person's ability to see a need and provide solution to that need rather than complain about it. There is power in selfless service; it generates unity.

Sharing Performance Data: Public and Peer

February 19, 2014 • 2:00 pm—3:50 pm • 2 CPEs • $289 per site (before 2/14; $339 after 2/14)

Performance data is useful for many purposes. At least two of these purposes involve the sharing of government performance data outside of your organization, in both cases to the benefit of your organization. This webinar will investigate what is being done by some municipalities and counties to make performance data available to the public. The experiences of some governments that have been doing this and honing it over the years may help your organization get a head start or find answers to the issues you face in public performance reporting.

The other way of sharing data that will be examined has very different issues and very different benefits. It is the sharing of performance data with peers, usually referred to as benchmarking. Benchmarking, like public reporting of performance data, has been around for years, but often it has depended on a facilitating organization and has been limited to annual data reporting, which has very limited application to improving operational performance. Our examination will discuss how benchmarking can help in an operationally-based performance management system, noting the advantages introduced, as well as the difficulties of implementing such a system.

Learning Objectives: To understand how using data can be useful both for internal and external decision making affecting government.

Speakers: John C. Fry, Program Director, Government Solutions, Revelstone

A Message from William E. Perry, Chairman Emeritus, Internal Control Institute

www.internalcontrolinstitute.org/

Proposals by the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board and the International Auditing and Assurance Board include sweeping changes to audit reports. Among the recommendations are that audit reports include: a) the most difficult subjective or complex auditor judgments; b) the most difficulty the auditor had in obtaining sufficient and appropriate evidence; c) the most difficulty the auditor in forming an opinion on the financial statements; and d) a specific statement about the ability of the company to continue as a going concern. These are significant changes from the few "boilerplate" paragraphs in audit reports now stating whether or not a company passed or failed the audit. In my opinion, to comply with these recommendations requires a two part extension to current audits. The first part is in the collection of facts, and the second part is the difficulty in drawing supportable conclusions from those facts. Both these parts require an understanding of the risks of the company under audit; and then the process used to identify internal controls related to those risks and the adequacy of those controls. Most importantly this requires the internal control specialist to formalize and document the internal control assessment process, and then documenting the process the internal control specialist used to develop an opinion on the adequacy of the company's system of internal control.
